Introduction:

Teaching imperatives can be difficult but with right strategies teachers can handle this task. First of all, teachers ought to demonstrate the types of imperatives. For example, teachers might show the slides about them such as: commands: "Open the door!" "Cut down!" (Stronger, more direct), and for requests: "Please be patient." "Could you wait for me?"

(Polite, less direct). Additionally, teachers have to make students give examples with imperatives. For example, one student has to make an order to his or her classmate to do something. As soon as he or she gives order, educator has to write down the imperative sentence on the white board. After writing down the sentences, educators ought to organize pair work for analyzing the sentences. Introducing both positive ("Open the door") and negative ("Don't touch my car") imperatives is so important. By explaining how the use of "don't" or "never" changes the command.

Conclusion:

This article has showed that effective imperative teaching can make simple memorization. By employing the interactive and effective methods mentioned here—role-playing, games, real-world connections—teachers can significantly improve students' comprehension and fluency.
